Below is a full list of the plants I grow. Unfortunately this year I won't have the time to change this list monthly, as I have done in the past. If you want any particular varieties, please contact me to see which are available and ask for a no obligation quote. Also feel free to advance order from this list. Many plants not on this list are often available from my market stall at Tatong (1st Saturday) and Violet Town (2nd Saturday) markets.

Prices:

Tubestock – eucalypts & wattles for paddock plantings
	(under 200)	1.50 }	must be pre-ordered. Order by November / December for autumn & spring plantings
	(over 200)	1.00 }
Tubestock - peas, wattles, mallees etc		2.00
3" round tubes		3.00 – 3.50
4" short		3.50
4" tall		4.50
5"		5.50

Varieties I buy in and resell are dearer, depending on the wholesale price. These are often plants protected by Plant Breeders rights

Grass prices .70c per single tube; 20 or more - .50c each (large quantities must be pre-ordered)

Indigenous Plants are marked with an 'I' in 2nd column

Cultivation

1. The vexed issue of Drainage! Many native plants require good drainage. You may be fortunate to live with soils which are free draining but if not you have a couple of choices – either source plants which are known to withstand waterlogged conditions eg. Melaleucas, callistemons, many eucalypts etc, or build up beds or mounds on which to grow the plants. As a general rule of thumb, plants native to the drier interior will require lighter, sandier soils & a drier atmosphere than say coastal plants which will cope with more poorly drained soils & greater humidity.

2. Prune, Prune, Prune! Prune little and often (monthly), right from the start to encourage a compact centre. This is important in order to avoid ugly bare branches developing later at the plant's base. Later, pruning once or twice a year will be all that's required eg. after flowering. Having said this, it's best not to prune the lower branches of eucalypts – these will drop off naturally as they grow.

3. Another problematic issue - Frost! Remember that a lot of our smaller natives are naturally understory & therefore prone to frost kill - try & plant these with some canopy protection. There are a few things however that you can do to lessen frost damage. Spray plants monthly through winter with Envy (available Bunnings), lay your mulch in spring (dark is better than light, wood chips is better than straw, dark gravel best of all- also less fire risk)

4. If necessary always Fertilise natives with a low phosphorus fertiliser, though the best fertiliser is organic matter added to the soil prior to planting, allowing the plant to feed naturally.

5. And now Water – or lack of it! Here's a tip from a customer - after digging the planting hole and loosening up surrounding soil, water the hole well with a soil wetting agent – there are plenty of these on the market, some are liquid, some powder, I've been using the liquid to date – after this has soaked well in, plant your plant, water in with the soil wetting agent, & follow this with plain water. Then mulch of your choice. It's also a good idea to make a small water holding ditch around the plant. This should see most plants through the summer with minimal waterings.
