Frank's niece says this will be easy money, but she didn't reckon on Frank spending his thanksgiving in New York. Written by Rob Hartill

Charlie Simms is a boy from Oregon who attends Baird School a Boys boarding school. Not unlike most of the other boys who come from affluent backgrounds Simms is there on a scholarship. He hangs around with George Willis, who's a daddy's boy, and his friends.

The headmaster learns that Charlie and George know who pulled a little prank and they refuse to say who. He gives them the Thanksgiving Holiday to think about it.

Charlie then goes off to a Thanksgiving job - taking care of retired Colonel Frank Slade, who's blind, when his family goes to visit some family for Thanksgiving.

After they leave Slade tells Charlie that he's taking him to New York for his own Thanksgiving celebration..
